The internet is a vast space where children can explore, learn, and connect. However, it's also a playground for potential threats.

Several areas of concern

Cyberbullying: Over 36% of adolescents have reported being bullied online. Understanding the signs can help in early detection.

Inappropriate Content: Children are often exposed to violent or adult material. Investigators emphasize the importance of content filters.

Online Predators: With a growing number of children using social media, predators can pose serious risks. Investigative data suggests that most child predators are groomers who build trust over time.

Setting Up Protective Measures

Monitoring Software: Consider utilizing reputable monitoring software that allows you to track online activities without invading privacy.
