AI Mark Carney Scam

A new scam has been going around. An AI video of Mark Carney shows him endorsing an investment website called QuilCapital on CBC News. Here, you would be able to invest $350 and earn a profit within a month. They also advertised stock, cryptocurrency, Forex trading opportunities, and more.

The AI video was posted on Instagram and Facebook and shared as ads. CBC contacted Meta and was able to have the fake ads removed. The spokesperson said, "This is an ongoing industry-wide challenge - scammers use every platform available to them and constantly adapt to evade enforcement. Our work in this area is never done, and we continue to invest in new technologies and methods to protect people on our platforms from scams."

The FCAA securities division director, Dean Murrison, says that you should "Always check the registration status of an entity at The Canadian Securities Administrators' National Registration Search online at aretheyregistered.ca before you invest, and do not deal with any unregistered entities."
