Cyber Bullying

As technology continues to shape how we connect, communicate, and share information, cyberbullying has become a serious concern with lasting emotional and legal consequences. What may seem like a harmless online post, message, or image can quickly cross the line into criminal behavior under Canadian law. Understanding how cyberbullying is defined and the laws that apply can help protect both victims and those who may not realize the seriousness of their online actions.

The consequences of cyberbullying are increasing as people are gaining more access to the internet. The government of Canada is interpreting different criminal codes to apply to cyberbullying, resulting in fines or jail time for the convicted.

The criminal codes:

- 161.1: Sharing intimate images without consent
- 264: Criminal harassment
- 264.1: Uttering threats
- 423: Intimidation
